

rsSmooth_training | Additional inferential analyses | 464 real eye-controlled choices

ric | slope $p < 0.001$  | OR/SD=1.59

nal associations - real choices both curve is a logistic regression fitted to unbinned real choices; its slope tests whether signed salience predicts T1 selection. B: last-third minus first-third changes in probability differences from 2x2 tables; positive values mean the predictor increases the response. Stars are Fisher exact tests with FDR correction. D: Pearson correlation with attention. Statistical significance does not by itself establish a meaningful effect size.