

Smooth_Moretraining | Additional inferential analyses | 135 real eye-controlled choices

tric | slope $p=0.071$ ns | OR/SD=0.73

nal associations - real choices

both curve is a logistic regression fitted to unbinned real choices; its slope tests whether signed salience predicts T1 selection. B: last-third minus first-third changes in probability differences from 2x2 tables; positive values mean the predictor increases the response. Stars are Fisher exact tests with FDR correction. D: Pearson correlation with attention. Statistical significance does not by itself establish a meaningful effect size.